The ARGUMENT.

ON the death of Doctor Johnson, a number of people, ambitious of being distinguished from the mute part of their species, set about relating and printing Stories and Bons Mots of that celebrated moralist. Amongst the most zealous, though not the most enlightened, appeared Mr. Boswell and Madame Piozzi, the Hero and Heroine of our Ecloque. They are supposed to have in contemplation the life of Johnson; and to prove their biographical abilities, appeal to Sir John Hawkins for his decision on their respective merits, by quotations from their printed Anecdotes of the Doctor. Sir John hears them with uncommon patience, and determines very properly on the pretensions of the contending parties.

WHEN JOHNSON fought (as Shakespear says) that bourn,

From whence, alas! no travellers return:

In bumbler English, when the Doctor died,

Apollo whimper'd and the Muses cried;

Parnassus mop'd for days, in business slack,

And like a berse, the hill was hung with black.

Minerva sighing for her fav'rite son,

Pronounc'd, with lengthen'd sace, the world undone:

Her owL, too, hooted in fo loud a stile, That people might have heard the BIRD, a mile: JOVE wip'd his eyes fo red, and told his WIFE, He ne'er made Johnson's equal, in his life; And that 'twould be a long time first, if ever, His art could form a fellow half so clever: VENUS, of all the little Loves, the DAM, With all the GRACES, fobb'd for BROTHER SAM: Such were the heav'nly howlings for his death, As if DAME NATURE had refign'd her breath. Nor less sonorous was the grief, I ween, Broom augustinas Amidst the natives of our earthly scene: From beggars, to the GREAT who hold the helm, One Johnso-mania rag'd through all the realm !

ii Who,

" Who, (cried the world) can match his profe or rhime? O'er wits of modern days, he tow'rs fublime! An OAK, wide spreading o'er the shrubs below, That round his roots, with puny foliage, blow: A PYRAMID, amidst some barren waste, That frowns o'er buts the sport of ev'ry blaft: A mighty ATLAS, whose aspiring head, O'er distant regions, casts an awful shade. By KINGS and beggars lo! his tales are told, And ev'ry fentence glows a grain of gold! Blest! who his philosophic phiz can take, Catch ev'n his weaknesses—his NODDLE's shake, The lengthen'd lip of fcorn, the forehead's fcowl, The low ring eye's contempt, and bear-like growl.

In vain, the CRITICS aim their toothles rage! Mere sprats, that venture war with whales to wage: Unmov'd he stands, and feels their force, no more Than fome huge rock amidst the wat'ry roar, That calmly bears the tumults of the DEEP, And howling TEMPESTS, that as well may fleep." Strong, midst the RAMBLER's cronies, was the rage To fill with his bons mots, and tales, the page: Mere flies, that buzz'd around his fetting ray, And bore a Splendor, on their wings, away: Thus round his ORB, the pigmy PLANETS run, And catch their little luftre from the SUN. At length, rufh'd forth two CANDIDATES for fame,

A Scotchman, one; and one a London Dame:

That, by th' emphatic JOHNSON, christ'ned Bozzy;

This, by the BISHOP'S License, DAME PIOZZI;

Whose widow'd name, by topers lov'd, was THRALE,

Show'd that all forts of learning fill'd his NoB,

And that in butchery he could bear a bob.

He sagely told us of the diff'rent feat

Employ'd to kill the animals we eat:

An ox, says he, in country and in town,

Is by the butchers constantly knock'd down:

As for that leffer animal, a calf,

The knock is really not fo firong by balf;

The beaft is only flunn'd: but as for goats,

And sheep, and lambs, the butchers cut their throats.

Those fellows only want to keep them quiet,

Not chusing that the brutes should breed a riot.

MADAME PIOZZI.

When Johnson was a child, and swallow'd pap,

'Twas in his mother's old maid Catharine's lap:

There, whilst he sat, he took in wond'rous learning,

For much his bowels were for knowledge yearning.

There heard the story which we Britons brag on,

The story of St. George and eke the Dragon.

Well stuff'd with every fort of useful knowledge,

Before us march'd and held a tallow candle:

'Twas glorious Johnson's figure to set sight on—

But lo! to damp our pleasure Fate concurs,

For Jo. the blockhead lost his master's spurs:

This, for the Rambler's temper, was a rubber,

As at Argyle's grand house, my hat I took,

To seek my alehouse; thus began the Duke,

"Pray, Mr. Boswell, won't you have some tea?"

To this, I made my bow, and did agree—

Then to the drawing room, we both retreated,

Where Lady Betty Hamilton was seated

Close by the Duchess, who, in deep discourse,

Took no more notice of me than a borse.

Next day myself, and Doctor Johnson took Our hats, to go and wait upon the Duke: Next to himself, the Duke did Johnson place, But I, thank God, fat fecond to his GRACE. The place was due, most furely to my merits-And faith, I was in very pretty spirits: I plainly faw (my penetration fuch is) I was not yet in favour with the DUCHESS. Thought I, I am not disconcerted yet-Before we part, I'll give her GRACE a fweat-Then looks of intrepidity I put on, And ask'd her, if she'd have a plate of mutton. This was a glorious deed must be confess'd! I knew I was the Duke's, and not her gueft!

Knowing—as I'm a man of tip-top breeding,

That great folks drink no healths whilft they are feeding;

I took my glass, and looking at her Grace,

I flar'd her like a devil in the face:

And in respectful terms, as was my duty,

Said I, my Lady Duchess, I salute ye:

Most audible, indeed, was my falute,

For which some folks will say I was a brute:

But faith, it dash'd her, as I knew it wou'd,

But then I knew, that I was slesh and blood.

 "Of what importance to the present company, is his age?—Of what importance would it have been to the world if he had never existed?" If we may judge likewise from the following speech; he deemed the present possessor of a certain throne as much an usurper as King William, whom, according to Mr. Boswell's account, he bescoundrels. The story is this—An acquaintance of Johnson, asked him if he could not fing. He replied, "I know but one song; and that is, 'The King shall enjoy his own again."

" Still

" And give that Boswell's back another flogging."

And op'd again his eyes upon the light -

Who mindless of old Johnson and his frown

And stern commands to knock the couple down;

Resolv'd to keep the peace-and in a tone

Not much unlike a mastiff o'er a bone;

He grumbled, that enabled by the nap,

He now could meet more biographic scrap:

Then nodding with a magistratial air,

To farther anecdote, he call'd the FAIR.

MADAME PIOZZI.

Dear Doctor Johnson lov'd a leg of pork;

And hearty on it, would his grinders work:

He lik'd to eat it so much over-done,

That one might shake the slesh from off the bone.

A veal pye too, with sugar cramm'd and plums,

Was wond'rous grateful to the Doctor's gums.

Though us'd, from morn to night, on fruit to suff;

He vow'd his belly never had enough.

Permit me, Reader, of myfelf, to preach—

The world will certainly receive with glee,

The flightest bit of history of ME.

Think of a gentleman of ancient blood!

Prouder of title, than of being good.

Dalght

A gentleman just thirty-three years old:

Married four years, and as a Tyger, bold;

Whose bowels yearn'd GREAT BRITAIN's foes to tame,

And from the cannon's mouth to fwallow flame;

To get his limbs by broad fwords carv'd in wars Like some old bedstead, and to boast his scars; And proud immortal actions to atchieve, 'See his hide bor'd by bullets, like a fieve. But lo! his father, a well-judging JUDGE, Forbade his son from Edinburgh to budge-Refolv'd the French should not his b-ckfide claw; So bound his son apprentice to the law. This gentleman had been in foreign parts, And, like ULYSSES, learnt a world of arts: Much wisdom, his vast travels having brought him, He was not balf the fool, the people thought him -Of prudence, this same gentleman was such, He rather had too little, than too much.

Bright was this gentleman's imagination, Well calculated for the bigbest station: Indeed fo lively, give the dev'l his due, He ten times more would utter, than was true. Which forc'd him frequently against his will, Poor man! to fwallow many a bitter pill-One bitter pill among the reft, he took, Which was to cut some scandal from his book .-By Doctor Johnson he is well pourtray'd: Quoth he, "Of Bozzy it may well be faid, That through the most inhospitable scene, ONE never can be troubled with the fpleen, Nor ev'n the greatest difficulties chafe at, Whilst fuch an animal is near, to laugh at.
